Description:

The Summer School Eating Walking Thinking (EWT) is hosted by the Department of Sociology and Social Research of the University of Milano-Bicocca (Unimib) and is organised in collaboration with 14 renowned external partners.

EWT is focused on the cultural “construction” of food as a dynamic construct. The way we eat is the result of a complex and multifaceted cultural process, entangling different traditions, places and cultures as well as new attitudes towards nutrition, health and sustainability. The prismatic and mobile dimension of food needs thus to be considered from different angles, disciplines and spaces, in order to understand (starting from daily practices) those radical changes, which are nowadays affecting lifestyles and collective identities at the both local and global levels.

Communities develop their preferences towards specific kinds of food and cooking. Cultural inclinations are determined by a changing interaction between food supplies, customs, consumerism, social environments and global transformations. Rules concerning feeding are also due to taboos and practices related to convictions about the values for a “good life”. Indeed, food behaviours are influenced by socio-economic and cultural factors as well as by religious and ethical conceptions. Food is not only a physiological instrument but also a cultural need.

Lectures based on philosophical, historical, anthropological, economic, social, geographic and cultural analyses in the morning will be followed in the afternoon by guided tours and visits to the Expo site, museums, botanic gardens, farm productions, religious sites, exhibitions, art cities, centres of excellence, which support a new culture towards feeding/ healing. A cultural, gastronomic and artistic tour in the region Piedmont will be organised in the weekend.

Rethinking food means to consider the multifaceted components, which determine the “final product” we eat, walking and meeting different social actors, who are interested in the improvement of the quality of life and the development of human capabilities, feeding and respecting the planet.

Information on Admission and Organisation

Prerequisites: Master level

Application Deadline: 7th June 2015

Organisation of the course: The summer school foresees lectures in the morning and visits/tours with interactive workshops in the afternoon. Students have to participate actively in all activities, as scheduled in the general program, to collect audio-visual materials during the summer school and to write a paper with a self-evaluation about ETW experience by 10th September. The paper should be related to a topic discussed during the summer school and approved by the directors.

Credits and a certificate of attendance will be provided to all participants as soon as they will have completed the general requirements, as agreed.

Students' papers and a collection of audio-visual materials will be published on line after the approval of a scientific committee. Papers presented by the scholars will be collected in a e-book.

EWT activities are open only to enrolled students with the exception of two public lectures on 16th, which can be attended by a general audience. Any other visitor can be admitted to lectures or tours only with the permission of the directors and under specific conditions.
